A New Year's Night of Mash-Ups

featuring:

Jip Jop

DJ Reese

and many, many other artists...

AmericanSong's New Year's Eve celebration headlines one of Chicago's most talented new groups, Jip Jop, performing a double set at the beautiful and eclectic National Pastime Theater. In one set, these young jazz/hip-hop virtuosi take you through unexpected arrangements of and jams on the Great American Songbook, while a second set features them in an extended performance of their own utterly original compositions. During the party, the band shoots a live music video, released in the near future!

Throughout the rest of the evening, DJ Reese and his colleagues spin original mash-up tracks while the complimentary open bar (generously sponsored by ApTpA) keeps things light and bubbly.

And! Throughout the evening, the rest of the a.p.t.p.a Producers intersperse the celebration with moments of illumination and unexpectedness, with theatrical moves and counter-moves keeping everyone guessing until the end of the decade...

All ticketing proceeds generated from this event will go toward the development of a future ApTpA collaboration, coming in March, 2011!

[About]

Chicago-based artists conceived AMerIcanSONG as an ongoing event-performance series, presenting an unprecedented and open theatrical space for an exploration of the “American Song”. The scope of its material observes no limits except for those suggested by its title. All music is presented in a new and unique arrangements, ranging from an a capella vocalist to a big band orchestra. AMerIcanSONG is also expressly concerned with the question of venue. It is committed to presenting its events in unique and unexpected places.
